

Montegrappa Pens

Last Updated Monday, 11 August 2008

It seems in our age of computers and technology we almost forgot about pens and paper completely, giving preference to e-mail communication and instant messaging. But Montegrappa, a world famous Italian pen manufacturer, produces pens so exciting and miraculous that it makes people of art consider the return to ink and paper. Montegrappa pens are a symbol of superb performance and artistic beauty. Among their fans are such famous and celebrated people as people as Ernest Hemingway, John Dos Passos, Fidel Castro, Vladimir Putin, Michael Schumacher and Sylvester Stallone.

Montegrappa is the oldest Italian company producing pens. It has become a true legend in the world of fine writing instruments. The company was founded in 1912 and immediately found itself in a key position during World War I. A great many soldiers used Montegrappa pens to write letters home. It boosted the development of the company and in the 1930s Montegrappa experienced a significant rise. The company began to manufacture its famous fountain pens that were made with taste, unique design, variety of colours and materials, new technical solutions and originality. In 2000 the Montegrappa company became a part of the Richemont group, the world leaders in the field of luxury goods, based in Switzerland. But it still produces best-quality pens which are world recognized and desired by every pens collector.

All in all, Montegrappa offers the following collections: resin collection (including Piccola, Nero Uno, Espressione, Espressione Duetto, Micra Caramel Brown, Micra Diamond, Micr@), celluloid collection (with such pens as Emblema, Extra 1930 Bamboo Black, Miya Argento, Symphony), precious metal collection (Reminiscence, Privilege Deco, Oriental Zodiac) and the variety of limited editions (La Torre di Pisa, Sophia, Tribute to Ballet, and many more). All what's needed to Montegrappa pens are intended for those who can't imagine their lives without strong emotions, romantic feelings and daily luxury.